COFFEE

Farm Information

Country: Colombia
Region: Bruselas, Huila
Farm: 4.845 members
Farm Size: 2,2 ha in average
Altitude: 1450-1800 masl.

Located at the south of the Huila department, Bruselas is one of the most important coffee producing area in the Huila. Most of the coffee farms are established in the central and oriental Andean highlands. The microclimate in the mountains combined with a high altitude creates a perfect environment suited for a highquality coffee growing. In this region most of the producers are smallholders. During many years of hard work, SKN had developed hundreds of producers of Bruselas in several sustainable programs. To ensure the best quality in the coffee, our sustainability team is constantly training the farmers on good farm management, selective picking, a delicate wet mill and sun-dried process. In the last years the coffee culture in the region has changed, moving from a high-volume production to a specialty coffee production. The varieties found in the highlands are mostly Castillo, Colombia and Caturra. The combination of varieties, altitude, microclimate, innovation, and great teamwork between SKN and the farmers delivers a delightful cup.
